A pride of lions stalks its prey.

Instead of going for easier prey like a gazelle, this pride ambitiously took on an adult giraffe.

An adult giraffe can stand up to 19 feet tall and weigh up to 2,800 pounds.

Young giraffes are more likely to fall prey to lion attacks, but as they grow they become more difficult to take down.

Witnesses say the giraffe was able to shake the lions off.

A Caribou Alphabet - A Caribou Alphabet by Leslie Hunt 100 views 3 years ago 2 minutes, 9 seconds
A caribou's antlers can grow mighty large.
Bulls spar in the autumn to see who's in charge.
Caribou cows protect calves as they grow and teach them to dig for their food in the snow.
is rewarded in spring with sweet foliage to eat.
caribou travel in herds the year round
When maddened by insects a herd may stampede
Spring's journey moves on at a much slower speed.

Kalmia plants such as Labrador tea
Migrating bulls follow trails old and worn while newborns arrive where their mothers were born.
Old man's beard is a lichen that hangs from spruce trees
The Canadian quarter sports a caribou's head while reindeer pull Laplanders home in a sled.
Vigorous swimmers of river and stream caribou show by their tracks where they've been.
An ungulate's hooves help on every terrain.
Itchy velvet rubs off and strong antlers remain.
