#Oxford Handbook #Tropical Medicine #Infectious Diseases #Travel Medicine #Oxford Medicine

The Oxford Handbook of Tropical Medicine provides a concise and practical guide to the diagnosis and management of diseases prevalent in tropical regions. Covering a wide range of infectious diseases, parasitic infections, and travel-related illnesses, this handbook is an essential resource for healthcare professionals working in or traveling to tropical countries. It offers up-to-date information on clinical presentation, diagnostic testing, treatment options, and prevention strategies, enabling users to effectively manage tropical diseases and improve patient outcomes.

Students benefit from organized study guides aligned with academic syllabi.

Introduction

Theme 1: Breast cancer screening

Why does the NHS spend millions of pounds on cancer screening every year?

Given the benefits of screening, why don't we screen for all diseases and spend all our funds on screening programs?

Why are mammograms not conducted for women under the age of 50?

If you are the new health secretary of the NHS, what would you spend a billion pounds on?

Theme 2: Medical ethics and organ donation

Theme 3: Graphical interpretation (life expectancy over the years)

What are the reasons for the improvement in survival rates of children aged 0-10 in the last few decades?

Theme 4: How would an artificial eye work?

Apogee makes a couple different sensors to measure UV light.

The electromagnetic spectrum and UV wavelengths – UV-A, UV-B, and UV-C.

How much of these wavelengths are in sunlight? And how do those photons cause sunburn?

The erythral response curve: one photon in UV-B is equal to 100 photons of UV-A.

The glass in greenhouses filters out most UV-B and UV-C wavelengths.

How does the erythral response curve look for plants?

Some beneficial effects of UV-A.

The effects of UV-C, UV-B, and UV-A from Bruce's research. It all depends on "dose."

A good rule of thumb is some UV is good for people – it's just the right amount. And some UV is good for plants – it's just the right amount.

A more in-depth look at the sensors Apogee makes to measure UV light: UV-A (SU-200), spectroradiometer, and ePAR.

With the correct dose of UV light, there is strong potential to improve plant quality.
