Le Château de Chantilly est un château monumental avec une riche histoire de construction et de destruction.

Les constructeurs construisent un petit château sur l'eau en utilisant la même méthode que Venise, et ils s'approvisionnent en un nouveau type de pierre provenant de carrières souterraines.

André Le Nôtre, l'architecte paysagiste, a dû faire face à des difficultés dans la mise en œuvre de ses projets à Chantilly en raison de sa rivalité avec Versailles.

La construction des Grandes Écuries a nécessité l'extraction de 50 000 blocs de pierre et l'utilisation de techniques innovantes comme des cheminées et des systèmes de poulies.
