QUALITIES Organizations need the kind of resources that will give them sustainable competitive advantage. Human resources have these necessary qualities

RARE Human resources are rare in the sense that a person with high levels of the needed skills and knowledge is not common. An organization may spend months looking for a talented and experienced manager or technician.

UNIQUE Human resources have no good substitutes. When people are well trained and highly motivated, they develop their abilities and care about customers. It is difficult to imagine another resource that can match committed and talented employees.

... management, of human resources, can form the, ...

TECHNOLOGY This implies an organization in which technology, organizational structure, people, and processes work together seamlessly to give an organization an advantage in the competitive environment.

Maintaining a high-performance work system may include the development of training, recruitment, and rewards.

SUPERVISORS Although the human resource department has responsibility for many areas, some of the tasks may be performed by supervisors or others inside or outside the organization.

JOB ANALYSIS Job analysis is the process of getting detailed Information about jobs. Job design is the process of defining the way work will be performed and the tasks that a given job requires.

HIRING Based on job analysis and design, an organization can determine the kinds of employees it needs and carries out the function of recruiting and hiring employees

TRAINING Although organizations base hiring decisions on candidates' existing qualifications, most organizations provide training and development experiences for their employees to broaden or deepen their knowledge, skills, and abilities.

The process of ensuring that employees' activities and outputs match the organization's goals is called performance management. Various measures are used to compare the employee's performance with the desired results.

TOTAL REWARDS The pay and benefits that employees earn play an important role in motivating them. Decisions about pay and benefits can also support other aspects of an organization's strategy. Organizations often depend on human resource professionals to help them maintain positive relations with employees. This function includes establishing and communicating policies to promote fair decision making.

STRATEGY Today's HR professionals need to understand the organization's business operations, develop talent for present and future needs, craft effective HR strategies, and reinforce organizational culture.

HR can collect and use data to demonstrate their practices have a positive influence on the company's profits or key stakeholders.

PLANNING Organizations depend on supervisors to help them determine what kinds of work need to be done (job analysis and design) and how many employees are needed (HR planning).

HIRING Supervisors typically interview job candidates and participate in the decisions about which candidates to hire. Many organizations expect supervisors to train employees in some or all aspects of the employees' jobs.

POLICIES Supervisors conduct performance appraisals and may recommend pay increases. In all these activities, supervisors can participate in HRM by taking into consideration the ways that decisions and policies will affect their employees.

Understanding motivation and communication can help supervisors inspire the best from their teams.

ETHICS Ethics refers to fundamental principles of right and wrong; ethical behavior is behavior that is consistent with those principles.

PERCEPTIONS Business decisions, including HRM decisions, should be ethical, but recent surveys indicate that the general public and managers do not have positive perceptions of the ethical conduct of U.S. businesses.

... the, workplace involve human resource management,.

Ethical, successful companies act according to four principles. First, in their relationships with customers, vendors, and clients, ethical and successful companies emphasize mutual benefits.

Second, employees assume responsibility for the actions of the company. Third, such companies have a sense of purpose or vision that employees value and use in their day-to-day work.

POSITIONS Some positions involve work in specialized areas of HRM such as recruiting, compensation, or employee benefits. Generalists usually perform the full range of HRM activities, including recruiting, training, compensation, and employee relations.

STUDY The vast majority of HRM professionals have a college degree, and many also have completed postgraduate work. The typical field of study is business, but some HRM professionals have degrees in the social sciences or law programs.

FIELD Those who have completed graduate work have master's degrees in HR management, business management, or a similar field. To be successful in HR, you need to speak the same language as people in the other business functions.

DEVELOPMENT HR professionals can increase their career opportunities by taking advantage of training and development programs. These may include passing an exam for a professional certification or learning more about the business.
