We want freedom from England and make our country, The United States of America.

We want to stay with England, our Motherland.

England treats us unfairly and charges us too much tax on things.

Life is better under the rule of King George

We want democracy and freedom, not Kingdom.

We are afraid to fight against England.

We will leave the colonies and move back to England

NATION -- American history in Special ...

Intro

On July 4th, 1776, the Second Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, approved the Declaration of Independence.

The new country, the United States of America, was at war with its former colonial ruler, Britain.

They also included leaders of the Anglican Church and people with business connections to the British.

At times, the Indians fought on the side of the British, but left when the British seemed to be losing the battle.

African slaves in the colonies were also divided about which side to join during the American Revolution.

Some American states also offered to free slaves who served, and hundreds of free blacks fought on the American side.

In New Jersey, Tories and Patriots fought one another with guns, and sometimes burned each other's houses and farms.

He supported the war as a way to continue his power in the world, and to rescue British honor in the eyes of other national leaders.

And young men were forced to serve in the Royal Navy.

The British changed their plans after they were defeated in the Battle of Saratoga in New York state.

The British experienced many problems fighting the war.

Even though they were the most powerful nation in the world, had a superb army, and of course, completely controlled the seas.

And they were dealing with the ragtag army of George Washington and a bunch of militia, and they couldn't do it.

European nations were watching the events in America very closely.
